A place where a cowboy's spurs make the music of the range.

Cartwheels, tin bellies, can openers and buzz saws—Even the names of them sound good. In fact, next to hearing the chuck iron ring, nothing sounds better to a cowboy than the jingle of his spurs.

Sure, cowboys wear spurs to help them when they ride. But it's nice to think they wear them for another reason—for the sweet music they make. Hearing the jingle of his spurs makes a cowboy feel that everything in the world is just the way it should be.

P0002270

20610336655

Source: https://www.industrydocuments.ucsf.edu/docs/qfcv0004